FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE (for Colbert's sake)

AHEM Rushes to Stephen Colbert's Aid

BEDMINSTER, New Jersey (June 25, 2013) - In an effort to help political pundit and talk show host Stephen Colbert secure his rightful place in the history books as a great founding father, the Anti Human Extinction Movement (AHEM) rushed to Colbert's aid Tuesday and offered him the opportunity to be among the first to sign AHEM's Declaration of Interdependence, which is launching July 4, 2013.

Although Colbert is often given a Tip of the Hat for founding a Super PAC and a nation to support it, AHEM realized that, in the process, Colbert forgot to get his Edward Rutledge on. This serious miscalculation on Colbert's part has created a predicament for America's ballsiest pundit, as his oversight has led to what some polls might suggest the public could deem possibly Wag of the Finger worthy. Lucky for Colbert, AHEM has offered assistance during this difficult time.

"Keeping fear alive, championing truthiness, recording Christmas albums, and being interviewed by Oprah... let's face it, that can get you only so far. Seeing the kind of dire situation he was in, we knew we had to step in to help Stephen," said AHEM Founder, Laura Stanik.

"We couldn't stand by and watch him go down in history as just another Evita, not when there was something we could do about it," added AHEM Co-Founder, Chris Blockus.

With the launch of AHEM's Declaration of Interdependence only eight days away, AHEM's leadership team knew they had to act fast. They reached out to Colbert on Tuesday with a video, open letter, and hashtag (#HeyColbert) to match. They offered the pundit the chance to be one of the original signatories to AHEM's Declaration of Interdependence so that he can avoid the potentially massive public outrage and shaming that might occur. Should Colbert respond (via @intrrptevrythng), AHEM's team is prepared to give him a preview of the Declaration, a prime signature location, and an opportunity to add his John Hancock before the Declaration opens to the public on July 4, 2013. With the clock counting down, the one question everyone is asking is whether or not Colbert will respond in time to let AHEM help him help himself.

The Anti Human Extinction Movement \(AHEM\) is a social change organization that recognizes we need to declare our interdependence and interrupt everything - from our mythologies to our lifestyles - if we're going to avoid human extinction. Since 2010, the organization has been uniting people worldwide to do better.
